Owens To Work At Deatsville, Ala.

Karen Owens, one of our seniors, has been selected by the Department of Education and the Southern Association to go to the Holtville School at Deatsville, Ala., to work with the high school English teacher for a period of two weeks.

Karen went to Holtville last Sunday, March 14, and will return to campus Sunday, March 28th. For two weeks she is to work with Miss Wallace, an outstanding English teacher, in this experimental school. Her visit is being sponsored by Dr. C. Jenkins, Director of the Southern Study in the Southern Association of Secondary Schools and Colleges.

The Holtville school has received national recognition for the work it is doing. It has been written up in practically all the educational magazines with a national circulation, and last year Life Magazine devoted four pages to a description of the unusual work being done in this school. It is one of the 33 schools in the 11 southern states included in the Southern Study.

NEW JESSIE TO GRADUATE FROM FRESNO COLLEGE

This time last quarter, Margaret Johnson was a senior in Fresno College, California. Now she is completing her last quarter of her senior year at Georgia State College for Women. However, she is going to receive her degree from Fresno College.

The reason for the drastic jump across the country is this—her husband is in the army, and all of a sudden he got transferred (as people do get transferred) to Fort Benning. Margaret wanted her degree and yet she didn't want a couple of thousand miles to separate her from her husband. After quite a bit of juggling, she is going to have her education and her husband, too. The president of Fresno suggested GSCW as the place for Margaret to finish her education, and the credits she acquires here will be sent back and accepted at Fresno, and she will receive her degree from there in June.

Friday's assembly program will be devoted to a talk by Dr. James E. Greene, Regional Educational Services Representative of the OPA.

126 Students Choose Dull Dorm To Full Bus

GSCW students have not chosen to blithely ignore wartime transportation problems, but more and more are deciding to avoid transportation jams. Winter Quarter 126 girls, a gain of 110 over Fall Quarter this term, did not leave the campus. Perhaps these figures, when compared with 32 and 52 girls remaining on the campus for the duration of Fall and Winter Quarters respectively last year, indicate a trend of the times.

FIRE DESTROYS FORMER NYA HOME LAST WEEK

Fire, believed to have started in the kitchen ceiling, practically destroyed the old Emmett L. Barnes, home located on South Clark street last Wednesday night, causing an estimated damage of $8,000. The house was owned by Exchange Bank, and was covered by insurance. NYA students had occupied the dwelling until the project was abandoned at GSCW.

Firemen, answering the alarm shortly after six o'clock, found the flames had made considerable headway. The blaze seemed to have been smoldering in the ceilings and broke out in several places air reached it.

Houses on either side of the burning house were threatened several times, but no material damage was done to either.

Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Stenbridge who occupied the second floor, lost practically all of their household effects. The Whatley family, who had only a few days or so before moved into the first floor, succeeded in saving most of their effects.

Cpl. William Reid Gives Recital Climaxing GSCW Campaign

As an added impetus to the March Red Cross drive here, Corporal William Reid of Turner Field, Albany, Ga., is to appear in an organ recital Wednesday night, 7:30, in Russell auditorium. The GSCW Red Cross campaign will be concentrated into just one day.

GSCW Greets 400 New WAVES

The second group of WAVES arrived at GSCW on Friday, March 19, to begin their course in advanced yeoman training at the U. S. Naval Training School here. This group of 400 young women replaces the Yeomen who completed their course last week.

Graduation for the first class was last Monday at GSCW. The battalion of 186 WAVES, accompanied by the military band from Camp Wheeler, marched in military formation, and passed in review before Lieutenant Commander Paul F. Schoeffel, commanding officer of the school, Rear Admiral William Glassford, Commandant of the Sixth Naval District, and Lieutenant Commander Mildred H. McAfee, Director of Women's Reserves of the U. S. Naval Reserve, and other naval and official guests.

Following the review, exercises were held in Russell Auditorium on the GSCW campus. Lieutenant Commander Paul F. Schoeffel presided and introduced the guest speakers, Lieutenant Commander McAfee and Admiral Glassford.

Miss McAfee acknowledged the Navy's appreciation for the Honorable Carl Vinson, chairman of the Naval Affairs committee, and resident of Millidgeville. She praised the city and college stating, "You will have a reward because women from every state, (Continued on Page Four)

LITTLE VISITS NORTH GEORGIA RECENTLY

Dr. Harry A. Little visited Dalton, Ellijay, LaFayette, and Chatsworth, Ga., in connection with the summer workshop.

Each class will have a booth, at which students, faculty members, and townspeople can make contributions, and will canvas the dormitories. Ribbons given to contributors will be "tickets" to the recital.

Music Director

Corporal Reid is director of music in the post chapel at Turner Field. He possesses a rich background of technical training and experience, having received the degree of Bachelor of Music from Syracuse University, and Master of Arts from Columbia University. A resident of Albany, he was a winner of the Georgia State Piano Contest. While in college, he became a member of Delta Kappa Epsilon, social fraternity, and Phi Mu Alpha, men's professional music fraternity.

Wide Experience

Reid's professional experience has been wide and varied in radio, concert, and church, and the teaching of music. He was director of the glee club, Radio City Music Hall, Rockefeller Center, New York City.

Conducted Chorus

He has conducted chorus, orchestra, and band, and appeared in concert as a pianist, organist, and accompanist. Last year in New York City, Reid was a member of the faculty of Cardinal Hayes Memorial High school and was organist and choir master, Trinity Episcopal Church, Morristown.

SKIP YOUR TEARS!

Sympathy is cheap. We often relish vicarious sorrow; we enjoy pitying someone unfortunate if disaster is removed from our immediate realm of experience. The Red Cross needs our money—not our tears. The drive on the campus has been concentrated into one day, Wednesday. We must make it a success, but success will depend upon cooperation. Will the results of the campaign reveal contributions from every student?

W a p e r

By MARJORIE SHEPARD

Attend, my intellectually curious readers, and you will be subjected to a biased monologue on the beginnings of things. There are really only two kinds of beginnings, you know—some things, like oysters, come from the sea; things generally a generation older, like mama and papa oysters. In fact, the majority of the world's breathing specimens begin that way. Simple, isn't it? However, there are other objects, usually inanimate, that are derived by some sort of motivation, usually animate. An example of this latter type is the check from home, which is eventually induced by innumerable threats to join the WAVES if some cash isn't forthcoming.

In the first category there are sundry hypotheses pertinent to the subject. The Origin of the Species theory, advanced by one Charles Darwin, a notable gentleman, that humanity evolved from these irresponsible little brethren of the naughty fugitives from the setting sun. Develop that topic any further would be fatal, as this isn't intended to be a discourse on the raciality of the Negro.

From a less scientific standpoint, there are platitudes concerned with both types of sources, such as "From little acorns, great oaks spring." That one's reversible—it amounts to the same thing, and "The child is father of the man," a delectable thought, to say the least. All of which leads us to no particular conclusion, except the questionable derivation of this article, which is explained away with "Necessity is the maternal progenitor of invention."

Wits End

By JEWELL WILLIE

We hate dying words. However dying words and farewell addresses, we of necessity, admit are customary. Wits End is not exceptional. We conform, though with no joy. This is our last will and testament. We are about to confine ourselves to the more serious field of editorial crusading for more and better lollypops. Editors are a queer race, fact is, we wonder if they really have very much to live for.

We have heard it rumored that they drink printers ink for breakfast along with nothing less than marrow of reportorial bones. Our courage has forsaken us and we cannot overcome life long scruples and a poor appetite sufficiently to initiate the practice as we as we ourselves are concerned.

Editors, we are informed, are duty bound to encourage scholarship and erudition among the members of their staff, at the same time they must push a paper into the highest channel of attainment. All of this with no outward indication of effort. Editors must keep up a correspondence which would floor Dorothy Dix or a habitual Want Ad advertiser. Editors must be Webster, Dr. Whigam, and the Encyclopedia Britannica all for the price of one.

We are not up on the tricks of the trade. We are forced into liberation while we read and absorb "How to Win News and Influence Reports." Any coaching from the sidelines will be appreciated.

Therefore, to thee, our reader, we bid adieu. We sincerely hope that you have learned nothing, and profited little via these 33 small symposiums.

New Wardrobe And Sulphur-Molasses Vie For First Place On Campus

By BEE McCORMACK

Bunny hugs and shrill screams beckoned in Spring quarter, as vacation-revived Jessie again flooded the campus. Puzzled countenances and strained nerves, so greatly in evidence during exam week, were no longer visible, but in their stead appeared a dreamy, far-away look, sure and certain symptom that the dread malady, Spring Fever, has begun its devastating annual epidemic.

With a remarkable vivacity, probably born of excitement, each girl welcomed her classmates and friends with a display of more energy, than has been expected since Spring put in her premature appearance during our blissful holidays. But, after this first explosive burst of vigor, indolence reclaimed the blooming scholars, who sank again into their dreamy, semi-comas and gazed reproachfully at unmade beds and packed clothes.

With a second burst of not-so-active vitality, this time born of necessity, beds were made and clothes were unpacked, after

ATTENTION CGA OFFICERS

Dear Officers:

You are the executives of CGA. In your hands has been placed responsibility for the governing of student activities on this campus. The girls who are here with you have placed their trust in your ability. It is a sacred trust for you and your activities influence, to a large extent, whether their stay at GSCW shall be a period in their lives when they develop a sense of wanting the really worthwhile things which life offers, or whether it was merely a time in which they did a task which had to be done. They believe in you; they believe that you are the most capable girls on the campus. Will you live up to that belief?

Do you ever get disgusted with yourself? When you doing with your life? It was given to you fresh and clean. You were given all sorts of potentialities. You may think you fall short in a lot of things, but if you can manage to analyze yourself in a totally unbiased manner, you'll find that you have lots of abilities that those you admire (or envy) lack. It's nature's way of evening out life, and nature is pretty fair and square.

You were given a life. You, and you alone, can make a person others will enjoy knowing—you make a person that you yourself will not get tired of living with, that you won't lose faith in. If YOU don't like yourself you can be pretty sure that others won't. If you don't feel that you are worth the effort it takes to make a life worth living—no one else is going to think you are worth any effort on their part.

You can make of your life what you will. You can set your own goals, and you can live up to them or not, according to what you make of what's inside you. But you have to acquire something that's worthy of the potential you.

Last Man To Leave Bataan Recalls Horrors Of War In The Philippines

"I Saw the Fall of the Philippines" is a vivid account of physical and mental privations endured as a prelude to the surrender of the Philippines. The author, Colonel Carlos P. Romulo, former Manila editor, Pulitzer Prize winner, and personal aide to General Douglas MacArthur, incorporated in his book actual experiences on Bataan and Corregidor, forming a revealing story which no true American can afford to pass by.

The horror, the devastation, and the utter hopelessness of a situation which could have been turned from catastrophe into victory, had the people of the United States heard the cries of their valiant soldiers, is brilliantly portrayed by the author. The heat of the tropics, the cries of the wounded, the groans of the dying, the suffering of the living, and the stench of gangrene become so vividly impressed upon the imagination that they seem real.

Colonel Romulo was the last man off Bataan. His dramatic escape by General MacArthur's peninsula in a makeshift plane on the night of the fall of Bataan, now forms one of the episodes of the present war, but to him it meant leaving the men he had grown to love and respect. Yet, to the very end, the morale of the starved, diseased men in their hot, grimy foxholes, was remarkable. They firmly believed that the United States would help, which they knew it was possible to get to them.

The wanton slaughter, and yet the unflinching confidence, of the American and Philippine soldiers in the loyalty of the people of the United States, should be a prick to the conscience of every citizen. Certainly Colonel Romulo's book should awaken us to the enormity of the task before us, and the absolute necessity of justifying the faith of our soldiers.

Breakfast Breaks Beautiful Dream

What happens at 6:30 anyway? Oh, I remember...but how well, now! Somebody sits on the rising bell for about 10 minutes, and the dormitory is like a fire house instead of a place to sleep.

Finally, I drag myself out of bed just before the whistle blows. The first thing I see is a mirror. "WHEEE!" I can't stand it; if I look like this naturally, I'll stick my head in a hole some place. Of course, it isn't quite natural...the bobby pins are hanging from the ends of my hair, calamine lotion is smeared from ear to ear, and wrinkles permeate my face.

New CGA Program Should Reach Individual Students — Hancock

"This year we want College Government to really mean more to EVERY student as an individual. We hope to do this by including in the College Government program, not only the rules and regulations, but ALL phases of college life that concerns us as students," stated Faye Hancock, newly elected president of college government, when interviewed last night.

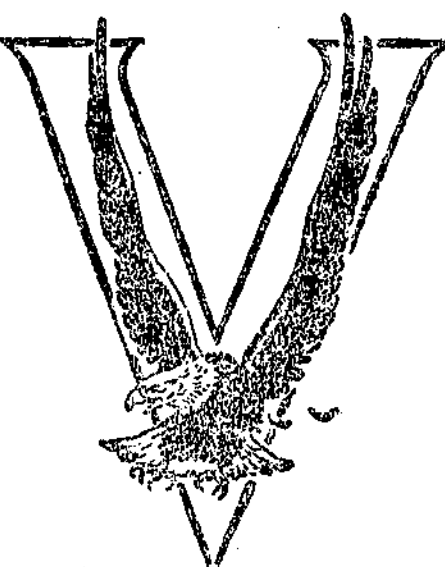

Textiles Displayed At Peabody Mon.

The Elementary Education club is sponsoring an exhibit of textiles in Peabody Elementary School library beginning Monday, March 22, and continuing throughout the week. This exhibit, sent by Miss D. Mastaglio, now residing in Panama City, Fla., consists of colorful, historic, and fast-drying pieces from the world over. Portugal, South Africa, Egypt, Norway, Sweden, are but a few of the lands represented in the display.

Although each piece on display may be purchased for a nominal price, the exhibit is not primarily a sale. Any student may attend the exhibit, even if uninterested in buying any of the articles.

College Government Association will strive to reach these goals, not only through the acts of Council, Court, and Honor Committee, but through the activities of special committees. Following are committee chairmen appointed for the coming year:

Good Manners: Leila Cathoun, Jane Sparks.
Scholarship: Betty Boyd.
War Activities: Anna Lunsford.
Handbook: Lottie Wallace, Jo Hunt.
CGA Scrapbook: Lottie Wallace.

Seniors Will Be Accepted As Officer Candidates In Navy Reserve

Atlanta — Women college students now in their senior year will be accepted as officer candidates for the Navy and Coast Guard women's reserves under a modification of requirements announced by Captain M. C. Robertson, USN, Director of Sixth Naval District Officer Procurement.

Candidates must present an endorsement from special faculty committees which the Navy Department is requesting colleges to set up. They will not be ordered to active duty until after graduation.

The plan has been inaugurated to encourage the Navy to enlist outstanding seniors who have talents and ability to contribute to the Naval and Coast Guard service despite lack of professional experience. Previously the only non-college graduates accepted were those who had two years college training plus two years business experience.

A student wishing to enter the WAVES or SPARS should contact an office of Naval Officer Procurement located in the H. Bldg., Atlanta; N. C. State College, Raleigh, N. C.; University of South Carolina, Columbia, S. C.; The Citadel, Charleston, S. C.; and Lynch Bldg., Jacksonville, Fla.

Applicants should obtain a certificate from the dean of the college stating that the applicant will graduate on a certain date and an endorsement from the committee. Letters are being mailed to accredited colleges explaining the procedure and asking appointment of committees.

Upon graduation candidates must submit transcripts of their college records and if accepted will go to Smith College for training. Those who fail to qualify will be discharged, or, if desired, transferred to enlisted status.
